Movers & Shavers

Before moving to our new Suite 1501 at 29 Broadway for the New Year, we struggled to divest ourselves of such beloved antiquities as our Selectric typewriters [still handy dinosaurs, but rarely repairable] together with their now-amusing accoutrements (see photo, left) including ribbons, carbon paper, brush erasers, various multi-font balls and – blast from the past: Ko-Rec Type! Harder still was purging a few collector-worthy dictionaries, fondly kept for historic perspective, since our founder, Lewis Bertrand, had hundreds in his collection begun well before starting this translation business in 1937. We're particularly fond of the 1958 Irish-English Dictionary, the 1915 edition of The Edinburg Esperanto Dictionary purchased for $1.00 and a Malay Dictionary purchased in March 1954 for $5.00, a bargain as it included an appendix of "Arabic spellings of Malay words." We did wind up keeping all of those and, sighing deeply, gave away 5 college language-learning textbooks, 4 filing cabinets, 3 old phones and a partridge in a pear tree, not to mention invalid city maps. The first known use of purge was in 1563 and more common in religious matters, as in cleansing or purifying the body or soul. Later uses referred to clearing one of guilt or to making one free from something -- whether by fasting or by political upheaval. We didn't need professional purgers or movers to just change floors; we're happy to stay in our wonderful downtown art-deco building.
